The ancestry of the Jermaines, as one branch of the American line of Jordans has been called, since the assumption of the name by John Jermain, born Jordan, of Sag Harbor, N.Y., is an ancient and proud French family of mark in the early history of Southern France and Western France, successively. In fact, if the unsatisfiable genealogists wished they can carry the line, old as it is in France, even further back to the old Italian stock and spelling, for 'Jordan', of old Jourdain and Jourdain, is simply Jourdan, in older Languedoc (South-eastern France) usage, and occasionally in Southern Languedoc it is called so today; and originally it means the immigration into Languedoc of the Giordani family-line

from Italy. -- E.Irenaeus Stevenson, New York, N.Y. 1897

FRENCH ANCESTRY OF THE JERMAIN(JORDAN) FAMILY

Statement translated from the original French memoranda and notes, transcribed and prepared in France by E.Irenaeus Stevenson, 1897.

The story of the Jordans, or to call them as they once were called and still are called in France, "Jourdans" and "Jourdaines", begins in the antique and richly historic old city of Toulouse, the "Tolosa" of Roman Days of domination over Gaul, and later the capital of Languedoc, especially as an independent country, often at variance with the sovereign, practically a royal territory and capital of itself. The long line of the Counts of Toulouse is as romantic a chronicle as chivalry affords. The active part taken in the Crusades by the Counts of Toulouse, at one period, is merely a single chapter of their bustling history, and they preserved their autonomy to all purposes, until a late date.

X to XIII CENTURIES

Count Jourdan de Toulouse (also called Count "Alphonse Jourdan de Toulouse" and also "Alphonse I of Toulouse") was of Italian descent, more remotely connected with the Giordani. He was in power in Toulouse in 1112, or among the latter group of Toulouse's sovereigns; and succeeded by Raymond V. VI, and VII., and to adventurous Simon de Montfort (1212 - 18). From the line of Count Jourdan de Toulouse was descended legitimately a branch of the Jordan blood. This branch presently transferred itself to Western France and to the seacoast, and thus became the Jourdan family-- at some date, probably earlier than the XIII century, identified with the City of La Rochelle, then a thriving and precious seaport and center, a strongly Protestant community, and destined to play such a tragic part in France's religious wars.

XIII to XV CENTURIES

In the year 1455, we find the Jourdans fully identified with the city of La Rochelle. Pierre Jourdan (whom we will call Pierre Jourdan I) is mayor of La Rochelle. He died sometime after the year named. We have no particulars of his marriage, or of his family, but there must have been a large descent from him.

XVI CENTURY

Pierre Jourdan II, of La Rochelle, is co-elected mayor of La Rochelle, in 1511-1523. He was known as the lord of the estate of Bonnomie. He married a lady of La Rochelle of high distinction, named Francoise Nicolas. Their son was Pierre Jourdan III, who will presently be spoken of as being baptised, adopting the Reformed faith. Up to that time the Jourdan family doubtless had been Roman Catholic.

Francois Jourdan (1) Of the same generation with Pierre (3) also was of La Rochelle. He married Marguerite Breton. A son is mentioned as theirs, David Jourdain (2) who was baptised into the Reformed church in 1569. The two men probably were cousins. Other descendants of their father Francois not stated.

Contemporary with the preceding was René Jourdan of La Rochelle in 1517, a surgeon. We have no particulars of his marriage, or children; but a descendant was another David Jourdan, to be called David Jourdan (2), who was a "conseillure du roy", a "counsellor" to King Louis XV., in 1630, and died at Nantes in August 1671, as will be noted later.

A further advance, a generation, brings us to the following Jourdans, all of La Rochelle, or of the old city's environs:

Francois Jourdan, ecuyer (esquire). He wedded Helene de Goulars, ca 1570. A daughter, Marie Jourdan is named. Other offspring and data not given.

Pierre Jourdan, named above, and approximately of the same generation. He, too, is of La Rochelle, the son of Pierre Jourdan 2, and Francois Nicolas, who was one of the most honored La Rochelle families. He (Pierre 3) is baptised as a "Reformed", in January 1569. We have no date of his marriage or family.

David Jourdan, also referred to above, was of this group, a La Rochellais, the son of Francois Jourdan (1), and Marguerite Breton. David also was baptised as a "Reformed", in January 1569, probably at the same time as his near relative Pierre (3).

It is noteworthy that these converts to Reformation principles were "presented" for the rite by a godfather and godmother of high nobility, Charles Poupart, the Sieur de Pons, a gentleman who had accompanied Queen Marguerite of Navarre, his sovereign, to La Rochelle ; and the lady Jeanne du Fay, was the marraine. Both baptized were adult.

Réeneé Jourdan, was a lady of the group of Jordans of this time, a cousin, or near relative. She became the wife of the Sieur Louis de Buisson, and they had a son known as Pierre (de Buisson) de Ponlebon, ecuyer, and also as Sieur de Pons, - later

Marie Jourdan (1) daughter of Francois Jourdan (2), and Helene de Goulard named. She married in October, 1592, apparently at La Rochelle, her relative (cousin?) Aime de Goulard, Chevalier and Sieur de Bois-Pourreau, an estate near Beauvais. No further data is at hand.

XVII CENTURY ( The Emigration ).

Jean Jourdan (1) was of La Rochelle, and was known as the Sieur de Mealle, of the vicinity. He married Marie Guy. It would seem that he died a young man, for his wife married again, and her husband, a relative, was the same Sieur Pierre de Ponlebon et du Pons, mentioned above, the son of Rene Jourdain and the Sieur Louis Buisson. We have no other data.

Catherine Jourdain(1) of La Rochelle , as to whom no other data, earlier than 1618, married in that year the Sieur Francois Péguinier, or Peguinie, scuyer and lord of the estate of Martiniere. Their family is not recorded.

Ozge' Jourdain (Ozge') (1) of La Rochelle, married in 16-- , Lucrèce Souvestre. Their children include two sons. One of them is of much importance to all Americans interested in the family, for it was he, Ozge', or Ozge' Jourdain (2), who at an advanced age, emigrated to the Huguenot colony at Westchester, (N.Y.) in or about the year 1685, taking all, or many of his adult family with him, as will be shown later, an episode like so many more inspired by the unwise Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. The wife of this emigrating son of Ozge' was Elizabeth Coudres. The brother of Ozge' (2) was Francois Ozge' Jourdain, who may be called, Francois (3); but he did not leave France with his brother, but "conformed", i.e., became a Roman Catholic, and was a soldier in the army of Marechal Luxembourg, in 16--.

Evidently contemporary with these is the mysterious Jean-Bernabe Jourdain of La Rochelle, or Angers, whose parentage is obscure, with other lost data; but who seems to have been a Catholic and something of a gadfly in the family. We do not know of his age, marriage, etc., but we discover that he was "embroiled" with his relative Ozge' J. (2), above named, and was thereby instrumental in the exile and the transplanting of the Jourdan line to the New World, where, at least, family quarrels and religious persecution could not follow them. Possibly this Jean-Barnabe Jourdan was of the earlier generation than Ozçé (2) his uncle, and in line with Ozçé Jourdan(1). If he were of the latter-named group he must have been an old man.

David Jourdan (2) of La Rochelle, and perhaps also of Paris. No personal data other than this descent from René Jourdan, the surgeon named, and that he was named a "counselor" to the king, (Louis XV.) , either as a special or general advisor, in 1660. He probably was a Catholic. He died at Nantes in August 1671.

It may be said here that it is not ascertained exactly where in the city of La Rochelle was situated the chief mansion of the old family; or if it is represented by any actual remains today. La Rochelle's severe war experiences , especially under Richelieu's siege, destroyed many of the antique homes, rich as is the town now in its old landmarks. We can be fairly sure that the Hotel Jourdan was in what is today the fine old Rue de Palais, or in the Rue Chaudviev; not unlikely near the "Grosse Horloge" gate, with its historic clock. Often must the Jourdans have seen and admired and walked among these noble relics of La Rochelle's early glory still in fine repair and usefulness. Its cathedral, its Hotel de Ville, among France's first structures of its sort; the Port Towers

All so imposing now and La Rochelle's pride.

Ozcé, or Ozégé, the French equivalent of "Hossa" in either form, Jourdan (2) is now met: the Jourdan to bear his name across the sea. He was, as had been said, the son of Ozcé Jourdan (1) and Lucrèce Souvestre. He married Elizabeth Coudres in October 1627. The couple had 12 children, among them Jean (2), Francois (4), Pierre (4), Catherine (2), Josepha, and Marie (2). In 1685, when at an advanced age, past sixty, and several of his children married and with families of their own, beyond doubt, there occurred the ill-advised Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. By that rash measure France lost thousands of her most valuable Protestant citizens, almost to the depopulation of many important cities, through the flight of the self-exiled to foreign coasts.

Among such fugitives was Ozcé Jourdan, despite his years. He sailed for Scotland in or about 1685, and members of his family fled with him. Curious is the fact that he was embroiled with his kinsman, Jean-Barnabe Jourdan, not at all improbable, on religious grounds; and the latter seems to have had much to do with the expatriation. The wife and mother, Elizabeth Coudres, is not named as a co-fugitive, and seems to have died before those evil days.

The refugess went first to Glasgow, and to Edinburgh, either because the ship's course left them no choice, or on account of their own plans. This halting place accounts for the tradition occasionally heard before now in the American family that the "Jourdan" ("Jermain") family came originally from Scotland, and were Scotch, or English, by descent.

They did not remain long in Scotland, however, presently Ozeé Jourdan and his family were crossing the ocean, bound for their natural asylum, indeed. The Huguenot emigration of many old neighbors and friends already had established a settlement in Westchester county, N.Y., on the fair shores of Long Island Sound, named New Rochelle, in affectionate remembrance of their beloved town at home. There were the Jays, the Demorests, the De Laney line and scores of others. In our later day a thriving, yet quiet, suburb of New York city, and a summer resort of wealth less than fifty minutes from the metropolis, it was well removed from Manhattan in 1685. There was ample room for all new comers.

After the arrival at New Rochelle, Westchester county, of old Ozeé Jourdan and his sons and daughters, as many as came, we know of them only that they prospered and increased, identified with the village and county. A private collection of letters to France (Gayarre, Toulouse) from New Rochelle residents of rather late date, speaks of Ozeé Jourdan and of his children as married and become land-proprietors. They must have acquired wealth. The son of Jean (3) probably succeeded to the parental estate, or to his share. The name "Jourdan" was anglicised and became "Jordan". The baptismal pre-names

"Jean", "Francois", "Pierre" , and so on, became John, Francis, Francis, or Frank, and Peter. The name "Marie" has survived, also, even to this day, as Maria, or Mary, and, by family custom, even as Marie.

So the family became rooted in America and known as "Jordan", no longer Jourdan, or Jourdain, the French family became an American one.

THE FAMILY IN AMERICA

Persuing its history , we have for several decades after this but meagre knowledge . John Jourdan , or Jordan (1) the son of Ozcé Jourdan, and himself known awhile as "Jean", (3), who came to New Rochelle with his father and the others, had married in France or else , married presently in Westchester county, and a curious legend in the family, strongly confirmed by Mr. Alanson Jermain, of Long Island, has made the wife of Jewish race. John Jordan (1), succeeded to a considerable estate. His son, and there may have been other children, was John Jordan (2).

John Jordan (2) , as we may do well to call the son, dropping further reference to his French name and progenitors, continued to live in Westchester county; and he doubtless owned a part of the estate that his grandfather, old Ozcé Jourdan had owned . He married a Mary Ann Daniels, an English lady of Dutch descent, who was born in New York in 1726. and a tradition in the family made her a devoted mother and the heroine of a curious expedition to find her son John, long after a family separation, caused by the Revolutionary war, had interrupted their intercourse. She died in St. John, New Brunswick, in 1826, at the home of her son Gilbert Jordan.

Their son, with those of other brothers and sisters whose names we know, was John Jordan (3), also of Westchester county. He was before long to be known by another name, when Revolutionary troubles or other reasons caused him to change his home and surname and to become / <sup>known</sup> in Long Island as John Jermain (1). His relatives, as noted in the records attached, were James, Francis, Samuel, who died young, Gilbert and Sarah.

Concluding, therefore, reference to the Jourdans in France and continuing the record of the family in the XVII Century, when the emigration occurred under Ozeé (2) no particulars are given of the family circles left in France. Nothing further is said as to the family of Francois Ozeé Jourdan, of the army of Marechal Luxembourg, nor have we data of the Jourdan lines at Nantes, Angers, Saintes, Bordeaux, Beauvais, and other points. In Toulouse, however, and at Tarbes the Jourdan name and line was represented approximately at this epoch by the Sieur Louis Jourdainie, and at least two of his descendants, viz., Francois and Justin Jourdainie, or Jourdan. Both of these later were "in religion" and Justin died an ecclesiastic at Tarbes, about 1708.

XVIII CENTURY

Of the line of Jourdan at La Rochelle during the XVIII

Century particulars are to be added, to be furnished shortly by the present La Rochelle representatives of the family (1897) . It continued to be largely represented in the place for several generations , and then diminished.

Of the line of Jourdan at Toulouse and at Tarbes, occurred early in the Eighteenth Century the decease of its only (particularized and male) members, the two religionists, Francis Jourdan (5) and Justin Jourdan, named. The latter died at Tarbes ca. 1708, as noted.

As the XVIII Century concluded and the tremendous upheaval of the Revolution shook the French provinces, to be followed by the career of Napoleon, two representatives of the Jourdan family became historically eminent. One of them was so in an odious degree; the notorious Mathieu Jouvès-Jourdain, of the National Guard, who was connected with the Meridional branch of the family. In authority first at Avignon and then at Paris, he is remembered and execrated in our histories, wherever the Revolution is pictured, for his cruel and indeed atrocious butcheries and shocking executions; under the nick-name of "Jourdan Coupe-Tete", or "Jourdan the head-chopper." His hundreds of victims were avenged by his death under the Guillotine, in Paris, 1794.

But quite a different military representative of the Jourdans, at this relatively recent date, and greater, as well as better of fame, is the Marshal of France under Napoleon

Jean Baptiste Jourdan (1726-1833), eminent as an admirable soldier and at certain periods of the Napoleonic campaign, the right-hand man of Bonaparte. He was also, earlier, in the active service of the revolting American colonies, and fought in the American Revolution in what was known as the "Auxerre regiment." He was a brave and brilliant man, but, unfortunately, his life was a stormy one, and it was clouded by what he felt to be Napoleon's injustice to him. He was not only a Marshal, but a General of the armies of the Sambre-et-Meuse division, Governor of Grenoble; Acting Governor of the Invalides, at Paris, and much else, at various times. A striking figure in the Napoleonic chapter, he died in 1833, and is buried in all honor in the Invalides.

XIX CENTURY

The data as to the contemporary and recent Jourdan line at various localities, La Rochelle, Nantes, Angers, and so on, are not tabulated, or completed at this writing but are to be recorded presently.

In La Rochelle, a near connection of the Marshal Jean-Baptiste Jourdan, named above, was long resident and distinguished, the late Jean-Baptist Jourdan, Judge of Instruction in the Civil Tribunal of La Rochelle. He was born at La Rochelle, January 20, 1811, and died aged sixty, January 31, 1871. M. Jourdan was a magistrate of great value and a learned historian and devoted to La Rochelle genealogies. His notes have been drawn from, with others, elsewhere in this record. He did not marry, and the surviving relatives of the Jourdan line in La Rochelle, a much lessened stock since several generations, were his brother, M. Jules Jourdan, and his sister, Mlle. H. Jourdan. Mlle. Jourdan married in 187-, Captain Volmerange, of La Rochelle, and it is to their quiet household in the city of their ancestors that the writer of these notes had the pleasure of communicating in 1897 the American story of their family, as well as meeting them. The family had no knowledge of the after-history of the Jourdans who crossed the Atlantic in exile in the Seventeenth century, nor of old Ozcé Jourdan's posterity in the United States.

Compiled and Arranged by Edward Payson Porter and Partially brought down to date (1929) by

CAROLINE ALDEN HULING, Chicago, Illinois

Prefactory-Explanatory

The records embraced herein were collected by Mr. Porter largely from family sources, and may be received as well authenticated. Since his death this material came into my hands, having been sent by him to an older sister. While I am not attempting to make it complete, as to all lines, I am doing so as far as the records of my own family, the descendants of Rebecca Jermain, daughter of John Jermain, my grandmother. Mr. Porter was descended from her sister, Caroline Jermain, who married the Reverend Stephen Porter, thus being the cousin of my mother, daughter of Rebecca Jermain and Alden Spooner. Many dates are supplied by me from family records in my own possession, and from other sources.

The arrangement is by Generations, as Mr. Porter planned, and save for dates and some other matter which I have supplied, are as he gathered and put them into shape. The record of John Jermain, the real founder of the American family has been compiled by me from various sources, largely from the autobiography of my grandfather, the late Alden Spooner, and military records published. It is my desire to do justice to one whom some Revolutionary reports declared to to be a tory. I desire to prove him a patriot.

MAJOR JOHN JERMAIN

Late of Sag Harbor, Long Island, New York

John Jermain, to whom may justly be ascribed the founding of the American family, descended from French Huguenot stock, as noted in the account of the French ancestry of the family, as given at length, herein, was born in Westchester county, N.Y., being in the third generation from Osee Jourdan the French emigrant, who came to this country about 1685.

During the Revolutionary war he was said to have served in the Colonial army, against the will of his family who sympathised with England. At the close of that conflict all other members of the family went to New Brunswick to live, anglicizing the French name to Jordan. The American son chose the name of Jermain, by which his descendants were known, and took up his residence in Sag Harbor, on Long Island, where he still further demonstrated his patriotism by becoming captain in an artillery company of militia. During the second war with Great Britain (1812-14) he was in command of the fort at Sag Harbor, one of the most exposed points on Long Island. His title of Major was not ornamental, but earned by actual military service.

While deprived of early advantages of education, he became well educated. He was a merchant of good property and much respected. His natural good sense and tact made him a superior man. Mr. Spooner, his son-in-law, writes of him:

He was uncommonly fine in his personal appearance, was much disposed to the study of law, and a popular speaker. There was no lawyer in the place and he supplied himself with a few law books and often was called upon as a pleader in court.

He was a federalist and I was a democrat, and hence in my visits to his house we often had long political talks, but we both understood propriety enough to be personally respectful. * * * Mrs. Jermain was very pious, and her house was much resorted to by clergymen.

Mr. Jermain accumulated a substantial estate and gave hearty support to every enterprise that tended to the betterment of his adopted town. Mr. Jermain married Margaret Pierson, who came of a line of educated people who were mostly ministers of the Gospel. She was born at Sag Harbor, L.I., March 17, 1764, and died at Albany, N.Y., March 30, 1833. The following brief mention is made of her ancestry, as her fine character left an ineradicable impress upon her many descendants.

Ancestry of Margaret Pierson

Col. Henry Pierson (1) came from England and settled at Bridgehampton, and died there November 5, 1660. His wife's name was Mary, and their children were:

Henry (2nd) Joseph, who married Amy Barnes; Benjamin who removed to Elizabeth, N.J.; Theodore, and Sarah, who was born Jan. 20, 1660

Henry (2) was born in 1652, and died at Bridgehampton, in 1701. His wife's name was Susannah Howell, daughter of Major John Howell, son of Edward Howell who came to Boston in 1639 and settled on Long Island in 1640. He was of a knightly family in Wales, and had a coat of arms.

Josiah Pierson was born in 1695, and died November 11, 1776. He had four wives and 17 children, of whom the following are recorded: Silas, Matthew, Sylvanus, Paul, Timothy, Josiah (2nd), Joseph, Benjamin, John, Martha who married Stephen Jagger, and Susannah, who married Daniel Hedges.

Sylvanus Pierson was born March 2, 1725 and died at Bridgehampton, L.I., August 23, 1798. He married Rebecca Ingham, of Boston, Mass. Their children were: Rebecca, Martha, Sally, and Margaret, who married John Jermain.

* "Footnote"-Henry Pierson the ancestor of the families of this name now living in the town (Sag Harbor) came to America during the first, or second year of the settlement. Like all, or nearly all, of the first settlers, he was a Christian. In his own fine penmanship ( he was town clerk for many years, on the town records, penned doubtless in a devout frame of mind, is found the following:

Jehovah I upon Thee call!

O make Thou haste to me,

And hearken Thou unto my voyce,

When I do cry to Thee. -- From the History of Long Island, by Gen Rogers Howell, 1866.

Abraham Pierson, nephew of Henry Pierson, was the first president of Yale College.

John Jordan, the Immigrant

Born in Scotland in 1729

The Father of John Jermain

P A R T I I

The J O R D A N F A M I L Y

NOTE- The information below was furnished by Samuel and Ezekiel Jordan, grandsons of John Jordan I, and was received from Mrs. Mary Alice Jordan, of St. John, N.B., in 1903, excepting the quotation, which is from a booklet entitled "The Jordans of Westchester County, N.Y." by one of the Family.

Our ancestors left France at the time of the Huguenot Massacre and fled to Scotland. John Jordan, father of John Jermain, was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1729. He was apprenticed by an older brother to a trade he did not like. He went aboard a ship which was captured by the French, and was taken to France. On the exchange of prisoners in 1755, he was liberated and came to America, settling in White Plains, N.Y.

He married, in 1757, Mary Daniels, an English lady of Dutch Extraction, who was born in New York in 1725. When the War of the Revolution broke out he was a staunch loyalist. In the month of July, 1776, an English fleet with a large number of troops on board, entered New York harbor, defeated the patriot army on Long Island, and forced it over to New York. At this time, the more to weaken the patriot cause, the English general, Lord Howe, sent a proclamation through the country, signed in the name of King George, offering large tracts of land in Nova Scotia to all who would leave the states in rebellion. Soon after this the Jordans, except John 2nd, (Now Major John Jermain) with many others, changing as much of their property as they could into gold, moved to St. John, Nova Scotia, now New Brunswick. In Sabine's history, "Loyalists of the Revolution" you will find this: "Francis and James Jordan, original grantors of land in or near St. John, Nova Scotia."

John Jordan I, died in St. John, N.B., in 1799. Mary Daniels, wife of John Jordan I, died in St. John, N.B., March 5, 1825, ninety-nine years of age.

John Jermain (John Jordan II) joined the Federalists, under Gen. Washington, in 1776. At the close of the war he married Margaret Pierson, as before stated herein, and settled in Sag Harbor, Long Island, where he conducted a store under the name of John Jermain.

A QUAIN DREAM THAT CAME TRUE

The maternal heart of Mary Daniels Jordan longed for the son who had been left behind in the United States and she dreamed three dreams at different times, of seeing this son in a certain house in New York city. These dreams so impressed her that she took passage in a sailing vessel from St. John to New York to find her son. She found the house, as she had seen it in her dreams, and knocked at the door. The person who opened the door was not her son and did not know him. Asking the privilege of resting awhile, she seated herself by a window, and her son passed. Quickly she tapped on the glass to call his attention, -he saw her- and came in. There was a joyful meeting. He took her to his home in Sag Harbor where she passed the winter. Telling her of the change in his name, she also went under that name while with him.

John Jordan III, was one of His Majesty's (George IVth) justices of the peace for the city of St. John. He was appointed by the Lieutenant Governor, Sir Howard Douglas, Baronet, to solemnize marriages. At this time (1827) only the clergy of the Church of England, and of the Roman Catholic church, could solemnize, and none of these resided outside of the City of St. John. He was called upon to go miles from his home to perform such ceremonies. His certificate, bearing the seal of Sir Howard Douglas, and signed "By His Majesty's command" Wm. L. Odell," is now in the possession of Mrs. M. Alice Jordan, St. John, N.B.

John Jordan IV., was a public officer during fifty seven years of his life; among other offices holding those of Coroner, Parish Court Commissioner, Supervisor and Contractor of Government Highways and Bridges. He held the last named office continuously for forty-six years, and was considered one of the best road supervisors in Canada. Every class of interest was represented at his funeral.

Daniel Jordan I . About 1814 the Saint John Savings Bank was organized by a few leading and benevolent men of the city, for the purpose of encouraging the working class to to invest what they could spare from their earning, by depositing small sums in such an institution at 5% interest. The person in charge failing in his trust, Daniel Jordan I was made cashier in 1827. As deposits accumulated investments were made by the president and cashier in Provincial and Corporation bonds, at an advanced rate of interest. At the end of forty years $40,000 had accumulated, over and above all liabilities. When all accounts were settled at the time of the taking over of the bank by the Government, when the Provinces went into Confederation, this sum was unclaimed. It was offered Daniel Jordan I, as a reward for his services, but was declined, and it was given to the St. John General Public Hospital. The Dominion Government, however, recognized his faithful services by appointing him the First Assistant Receiver General for this branch, and his brother, Francis G. Jordan, who was an assistant in the bank, was made the first cashier; thus admitting that they were the right men to fill these important positions.

AMBROSE LATTING JORDAN supposed to be the person referred to as son of Francis Jordan, was the first Attorney General of New York State to be elected by the people. His ancestry has not been authoritatively established. He was an eminent lawyer and prominent in New York state. The date of his birth is given as 1789, which would correspond with the record, as the date of his father's birth (not given) probably was 1763, and doubtless he married when about twenty years old. In "Courts and Lawyers of New York State" by Alden Chester, published in 1925, there are several references to Mr. Jordan, and he is said to be a native of Hillsdale, Columbia County, born May 1 (or 5) 1789, of Scotch-Irish parentage. It will be noted that the sojourn of the Jordan-Jermain family in Scotland, prior to their coming to America from France, gave color to the story that they were Scotch. He is referred to in a number of publications and his record as an American citizen is highly honorable, he having held several offices, serving in the legislature and as a member of the Constitutional convention in 1846. Under this new constitution he was the first to be elected Attorney General of New York state, in 1847. What authority there is for the statement that he was a son of Francis Jordan I have been unable to discover, but the date may be said to correspond and give color to this story. C.A.H.

NOTE- It may be well here to emphasize the fact that despite the tory sympathies of the older generation, it may be of interest to note the fact that many of the younger generation returned to the United States, the land of their birth, and became patriotic citizens.
